Modest donation can make a big difference, charitable groups say

The holiday gift-buying season is under way, and most people are busy shopping for presents for relatives and friends, or at least shopping for ideas for gifts.

But it's also the season when many people buy gifts, or do acts of kindness, for people they don't even know and may never meet.

Chevy Chase Community Center, Indiana - Operates an emergency food pantry, clothing bank, children's summer feeding program and unemployment help center.

Twenty-five dollars could buy many warm clothing items for the center's "Hat and Mitten Tree" or toys that are distributed to less fortunate children at Christmas.
